A Lesson In Giving.

By CECILIA A. LOIZEAUX.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastman.

"Of course I like you to be sympathetic and generous—it's all a part of you. But I do wish you could be made to see the evils of such recklessly indiscriminate giving," said Howard.

They had just passed a one armed beggar, who had stepped in front of them with his monotonous whine for coins. Howard, after a sharp glance had said curtly, "Stand aside!" and brushed away the extended hand and taken Beth's arm to guide her past. But with an exclamation of pity the girl had turned back to empty into the man's hand all the change in her little gold mesh purse.

"My giving is not indiscriminate. That man was maimed—he had only one arm—and the other one was trembling from palsy or weakness," answered Beth, with some heat.

"My dear, that man's hand is trembling from drink, and as likely as not he has another arm under his coat. You don't realize what frauds these professional beggars are. Can't you see, Beth, that it's the principle of the thing that is wrong? The money you give so carelessly might better be used for people who really need it, and you seldom find that kind begging on the streets."

They had reached Beth's home by this time, and, as usual, Howard went in with her for the afternoon tea. Beth always made by the living room fire. When they entered the house the subject was not continued, though they both felt dissatisfied. Beth busied herself at the little table silently. There was an angry light in her eyes. She resented Howard's interference in such things, and she told herself that Howard was not quite what she had thought him.

Howard was about to go when the front door opened and shut, and Beth's Uncle John, with whom she had lived since the death of her parents, came in and went up the stairs to his room. Howard settled back into his chair, for he liked Beth's uncle, who was a jolly old man. But Beth looked unaccountably nervous, rattled the tea things and rang the bell for more hot water. She jumped guiltily as an irate voice from upstairs called, "Beth!"

"Yes, uncle, what is it?" she called back, going to the foot of the stairs. "What have you done with my gray smoking jacket and those black slippers? I can't find them anywhere, and I left them right here on the floor. I wish Mary wouldn't have cleaning up streaks."

Beth darted a queer glance at Howard and then ran up the stairs. She spoke so softly that Howard could not hear what she said, but her uncle's voice was far reaching, and the young man listened shamelessly, for he guessed what was the matter. Now he grinned silently to himself as the one sided conversation went on.

"What the deuce!" he was fairly roaring. "That jacket is the only one I've ever had that's any good. And I look like a peeled onion in that purple thing, and you know it." There was a silence. Then the voice in somewhat softer tones went on.

"Well, if you can't rest unless you're giving things away and my things are attractive to you, you just make it a point to ask me what I can get along without. Well, then, give me my old slippers."

Another silence. "Do you mean to tell me that you gave away that pair of slippers that I've been breaking in for a year and just got adjusted to my feet? By George! Who got those?"

Silence. "Well, he didn't need them as bad as I do. He couldn't feed my smoking jacket to a starving baby, and those slippers will fit his sick wife to perfection, I suppose. What else did you give him?"

Another silence—then a snort. "There! That's enough! Don't tell me too much at once! I'm liable to get mad!" When he heard Beth's heel taps on the stairs Howard strolled to the farthest window and turned innocently around to speak to Beth as if nothing had happened. Her face was red and her eyes wet.

"Uncle's cross tonight," she said airily. "I—he acts as if he had lost something." She did not speak again, but began to make fresh tea, and in a minute or two her uncle appeared in the doorway. He had on a purple silk jacket and a purple cap stuck jauntily over one ear on his bald head.

"Look like the shab's butter, don't it?" the elder man said as he carefully lowered his heavy figure into his easy chair and stuck his feet out before him. "Your turn will come. You'll live to see your best shoes tripping down the street, and you'll meet your hats and coats and trousers strolling about the city until you won't know whether you're dreaming or whether there are two of you."

Harvey was a little uneasy. He looked at Beth and smiled, and she looked back coldly, thinking that she read "I told you so" in his face. She disappeared when she had given her uncle his tea and did not come down again until Howard was gone and dinner was ready.

The next morning Beth spent in overhauling all her clothes, piling into a great heap on the floor everything that she did not like or was a little soiled. And on the top she put the spring suit that Howard liked so much. It was a little dirty around the edge of the skirt, though that was not why she added it to the pile.

"That's mine at any rate," she said

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Golden Medical Discovery, and "Favorite Prescription." The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator, and acts especially favorably in curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder—curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrh, dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous colitis, constipation, uterine or other pelvic organs). Even in the chronic or chronic stage of these affections it is often successful in effecting cures.

"The Favorite Prescription" is adapted for the cure of one class of diseases—those resulting from weakness or debility, from irregularities in the menstrual system, it is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nerve. For weak women, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the breakdown, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulae of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each of the great entering into these medicines. The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-sedative, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Pills, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

to herself as she gathered the garments into her arms and carried them to the basement, where she bestowed them all upon the new laundress. That woman left in a hurry before her day's work was done, fearing that Beth would change her mind. Two days later Howard started up to Beth's in his car to take her out for a long drive, as arranged with her over the phone. What was his amazement, therefore, as he drove slowly through the downtown streets to see Beth in her gray walking suit and to see just disappearing around a corner. He called to her, but she did not hear, and the young fellow stopped the machine. With set chin and tightened lips and hurt eyes he drove slowly on up the hill and past the house, where Beth in a blue dress waited in the hall.

When she saw Howard whiz by, never once glancing at the house, she was first indignant and then angry. And after an hour of deliberation, during which her wrath increased, she rang for a messenger and put into his hands a note and a little sealed packet which contained her ring.

She came down to dinner pale and wan. Her uncle looked at her sharply, seeing traces of tears, and decided that he would not.

"I'm sorry to speak about this again," he said, clearing his throat, "but if you must go slumming I insist that you take some escort with you. I'll go if Howard will not. I was amazed to see you down there among the secondhand stores in that part of town after what I told you the last time. I don't care why you go; it is not safe nor respectable, either."

Beth was staring at him open eyed. "I was not down there this afternoon," she said indignantly.

The doorbell rang, and Howard was ushered into the dining room by the maid. He came up to the table and put a little packet down on the cloth. "Beth," he said, "you don't mean it, do you? I can't let you break our engagement like this without telling me what is the matter. What have I done?"

Beth stood up, looking like a fawn at bay. Her eyes were dilated with fear, her hands clutched. She looked from Howard to her uncle, but did not speak. Finally her uncle went over to her and put his arm around her. "What is it, little girl?" he said as one would speak to a child.

Beth began to sob and then to laugh. "It's all so funny," she sobbed. "I—I guess it's mostly my fault. I gave that gray suit away, and the hat too." The men glanced at each other and then laughed. Howard made a step forward, but Beth ran behind her chair.

"And I was at home," she said to him—"I was at home, and you did not stop—when you had asked me to go. And I was all ready and waiting for you."

"But, Beth, I met that gray suit downtown. I was sure it was you, and I didn't know what to do. I didn't know until afterward that I had gone by your house. Don't you see, dear?" But this time he came around behind the chair, too, and Uncle John sat down and pretended to eat his cold dinner.

When Uncle John reached home the next night he found the old smoking jacket and slippers laid out for him. He smelled the sulphur with which they had been fumigated and asked no questions, though he didn't really need to be told where they had come from. He had seen Beth and Howard in the big green car steering toward the secondhand district in the morning, and he had had his hopes aroused.

Not long afterward, while Beth was busy with her trousseau, her uncle came in softly and heard her saying to a caller: "But there's nothing so unwise as indiscriminate giving. I had a lesson, and I know."

The Widow In White.

By LOUISE MERRIFIELD.

Copyrighted, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"There she goes!"

Little Compton gave the alarm, and everybody in the Pasquale studio leaped for the windows as the white automobile whizzed by. Four easels crashed on the floor. The model, a slender, arched figure, with a spray of spring boughs over the bare shoulder and a trail of grass green velvet from bust to ankle, broke her pose and turned her head.

Pasquale himself had been the first to run and had a front seat, so to speak, at the middle window, with Jules Le Breton towering over him.

No one spoke until the moment of suspense was passed and the white auto had swerved around the corner of the Boulevard des Anes. Then a low, intense breath of released suspense sounded audibly through the bare room, and the Pasquale students stared into one another's eyes, rapturously, glancingly, just exactly as they had done every day at the same hour for six days.

"She is celestial," murmured Le Breton huskily as he lifted his fallen easel.

But he did not place crayon to paper again that afternoon. He sat and smoked a short Amiens pipe and stared at the spray of spring boughs on the model's bare shoulder, and the blood bounded through his veins joyously, bubblingly, like the little mountain brooks breaking through thin April ice.

Le Breton had spring fever; also, in a minor degree, Le Breton was newly in love again.

Pasquale crossed the room as soon as the model had resumed the pose, and he bent affectionately forward over Le Breton's chair and tapped on the plump bowl of the Amiens pipe to recall Le Breton's soul from the asphodel meadow of day dreams.

"Mon ami, I have discovered a small thing," he said in an undertone so that Compton from Delaware would not hear. Compton from Delaware was a cynic, a person utterly beyond the gates of spring enchantment. He had the artistic temperament, but it showed itself in his work, not his hair nor his loves nor his words. And therein Compton from Delaware was absolutely an original and unique character among the art students at Pasquale's. Also he was absolutely despised as a hopeless business proposition. But the eyes of the girl with the spring boughs passed over Le Breton's blond ringlets and velvet blouse and lingered on the close cropped head of Little Compton from Delaware.

It was the way he had with women. "I have discovered her habitation," whispered Pasquale. "She is a widow."

"A widow in white!" Le Breton's half closed eyes flashed open. "Ah, but it is her whim. It is her divinity revealing itself. It is her symbol of release. She did not love him if she can mourn in white. But the art elusive, enchanting, mysterious, to garb herself from top to toe in svelte white snude, to swathe her face in creamy chiffon like an houri, to challenge one's daring, to pique the curiosity, does it not all prove the woman behind the veil, the woman celestial, yet with the dash, the mere touch, so like the high light of the diabolique in her bereaved nature? Where does she live, Pasquale?"

Pasquale glanced sideways at Little Compton. He was extremely busy giving a touch to the clasp of gold on the model's left arm, a touch to make it gleam.

"At the Hotel Lombard," said Pasquale. "I have engaged the interest of the small boy at the garage. She is a widow, Mme. Germaine—La Belle Germaine. And she lives at the Lombard. So, my Jules, I give you the cue for the romance, n'est-ce pas?"

Le Breton rose and stretched his arms widely until they touched the gas jet above his head.

"I shall fling violets at her—rust clusters of them, dew wet; Parma violets—straight into her arms as she passes each day until she recognizes me," he said. "I shall pierce the white chiffon veil with opera glasses and see if her eyes divine are melting blue or gloriously, ravishingly dark, like la Zingari. I shall!"

"You will make the customary blooming idiot of yourself, Jules," called Compton from Delaware over his shoulder with cheerful unctious. "How many children did the last divinity have after you had followed the trail of romance for two weeks and finally landed her in a bakery over the Seine?"

Le Breton raised a glass of ice water to deposit it below the adjacent coat collar, but he stayed his hand and drank the water diplomatically. Once, once long ago, he had not stayed his hand, and the memory of the resultant episode lingered yet. Little Compton had risen swiftly and deftly, promptly fished him. And even the model had laughed. It was not a pleasant memory. Therefore Le Breton stayed his hand and drank of the ice water.

The next day Le Breton vanished from the atelier at a quarter of 3 precisely, but his intentions were public.

The windows of Pasquale's were occupied by an absorbed audience long before the whirr of the white auto sounded on the still hush of the mid-afternoon. By leaning from the windows one could catch a glimpse of a figure standing on the corner, a patient, noble figure under the quaint wrought iron street lamp, the figure of the knight errant, in paint daubed velvet blouse, cap rakishly, romantically away and in the hands the most beautiful, enormous, languishing bouquet of Parma violets that Le Breton could find. A beauty it was, a regal offering, with silken, tasseled cord of gold, and the stems, the tender young stems, prisoned in the foil violet dress.

Presently there was the sound of the chariot celestial, the cream white automobile, with the tiny gold monogram on one side, so vague, so unreadable, so divinely mysterious to the faces that crowded one above another at Pasquale's windows, like cabbages in the market stalls.

"She comes, mon Dieu; she comes," gasped Pasquale ecstatically. "Now, Jules, now brave boy, may thy aim be sure as Bro's dart!"

The white auto purred softly, swiftly down the pavement. Le Breton raised his cap, raised his hand to toss his offering, and lo, he tossed not, for beside the slender figure in the white suede cloak sat Little Compton, severe, masterful and totally oblivious of either Le Breton or the windows of Pasquale.

It was the deadly blow, but Le Breton showed his ancestry. A Le Breton had been in Bayard's band of vagabond free lances and had won a marquise for deeds heroic.

So Le Breton in the velvet blouse stayed not his hand. Neither did he remember the lesson of the spilled ice water. He threw the violets fairly, and they fell in the lap of the widow in white. Out from Pasquale's window went up a smothered cheer. The veiled head bowed, oh, but so slightly, in Le Breton's direction. Still it bowed. And Little Compton raised his American panama in grave salute of heroism undaunted.

The next morning Pasquale was prepared for the challenge. Pasquale himself announced he would present the challenge the instant after Compton from Delaware showed fight. Even the model with the spring boughs trembled when the double glass doors opened and Little Compton entered. He was whistling. Ye gods, the airy arrogance of the assured American, mused Pasquale's crowd and waited for the blow.

It fell. Straight over to Le Breton's easel walked Compton from Delaware. His hand and gait were resolute, his eye steady. There was even a smile on his lips. As he stood a pace away Le Breton sprang to his feet, and Pasquale's held his breath for the onslaught of the love champions.

But Little Compton smiled. More, he slapped Le Breton upon the shoulder in the manner of Harvard.

"Old man, you're all to the merry," he said. "I didn't think you had the grit. I have the honor to be the bearer of a message from Mrs. Henry B. Germaine, my dearly loved sister. She requests your presence at afternoon tea today." He paused to light a cigarette while Le Breton nursed his mental agony. Then finally he handed over the medicine for spring fever.

"The violets are on her boudoir table, Jules, and she's been a widow four years."

Brevity and Wit.

Brevity as the soul of wit is exemplified in many popular sayings. Wit is by no means an inevitable ingredient in proverbs. Many of them are of doubtful sense, and some are foolish, yet there is a certain spice. The definition of proverbs by Howell as "Sayings which combine sense, shortness and suit," is in the main true. Though truth may be altogether absent and wit barely perceptible, yet there must be a certain "salt," which gives life and savor to the saying.

It would be difficult to find sayings more telling than some of the shortest—such, for instance, as "Forewarned, forearmed," "Extremes meet," or the ancient "Inter malleum et incudem" (between the hammer and the anvil). Many sayings which in English are short were briefer still in their original classical form.

That the soul of wit was exemplified most strikingly among the Greeks is only what we should expect. It is curious to remember that our word "Laconic" preserves the memory of the reputation for conciseness of speech borne by the people of one part of Greece—the Laconians or Spartans. When Philip of Macedon threatened them, "If I enter Laconia, I will level your city to the dust," they made the famous re-

The Ocean Liner Stewardess.

It appears that some stewardesses in the best liners running between Liverpool and New York make from £20 to £30 per month. The average tip varies from 10 shillings to the modest half crown, although occasionally five pound notes change hands. "It is quite true," says a stewardess in a London paper, "that ladies are not nearly so generous as gentlemen. I worked like a slave one trip, night and day, waiting upon an exacting millionaire's wife and children, but they left the ship without giving me even 'Thank you.' I know one stewardess, though, who received £25 as a tip, from one of the Vanderbilts, who had his servant standing by him with a satchel of sovereigns, from which all the stewards and other attendants received something. The most generous people are military and civil officers homeward bound from India. Sometimes a rich gentleman passenger falls in love with a stewardess and marries her. But fortunes from tips are rarely made, although a comfortable competency is frequently secured in this way."

Curious Place Names.

Chicago is an Indian word, meaning wild onion or skunk weed. Chesapeake is also Indian and is variously interpreted as highly salted water, great waters or country on a great river. Chautauqua is also an Indian word and has had several interpretations, as a foggy place, a bag tied in the middle (referring to the shape of the lake), a place where a child was washed away, where the fish are taken out, place of easy death or, finally, place where one was lost. Des Moines is usually supposed to refer only to the Trappist monks, and it is also connected with an Indian word meaning the road. Niagara is an Indian word, signifying across the strait or at the neck. Shenandoah is Indian and means the spruce stream or a river flowing alongside of high hills. Massachusetts means near the great hills or the hill shaped like an arrowhead or, again, the blue hills. Mississippi means great water or gathering in of all the waters or an almost endless river spread out—Leslie's Weekly.

Playthings of Ancient Children.

The most primitive toy is the doll. It dates back to prehistoric times and is found in every part of the world. This one would naturally expect to find. A child, seeing its mother nursing other younger children, would imitate the example with an improvised doll. Toy weapons, again, are older than history. Many of the other toys at present in use date from the earliest times of which we have any record. In the tombs of the ancient Egyptians, along with painted dolls having movable limbs, have been found marbles, leather covered balls, elastic balls and marionettes moved by strings. Ancient Greek tombs furnish clay dolls, toy horses and wooden carts and ships. In the Louvre there are some Greco-Roman dolls of terra cotta with movable joints fastened by wires. Greek babies had rattles. Greek boys played with whipping tops. So did the boys in ancient Rome.

Why Safety Matches Strike on Glass.

There are two reasons why ordinary safety matches can be struck on smooth glass. The head of the safety match is composed of a mixture of sulphide of antimony, chlorate of potassium and powdered glass. A comparatively small increase of temperature will cause this to ignite. Now, glass is a bad conductor of heat, and the rapid passage of the substance over it raises the temperature of that substance sufficiently for that purpose. When the glass is rough the friction crumbles away the loosely combined mixture before the temperature rises to the point of ignition; hence, given the composition of the match head, the two circumstances which answer the question are the comparative smoothness of the glass and its imperfect conductivity of heat.

The Eternal Recompense

The open door of the school struck terror to your vacation-loving soul. It seemed as if joy had gone forever. But you forgot all that when your eyes strayed across the room. Prim, beribboned heads bent with studious affectation over books. Demure eyes stole sideways glances in your direction. You regarded them impersonally until there came the one thrilling, fleeting flash of brown eyes for which you had been waiting. Blushing deeply, you turned to lose yourself in life's serious business.

On your way home, by the merest chance, you found your footsteps beating slow cadence with hers. Awkwardly you tried to conceal the delight of this almost forgotten joy. Once more life was bright with their iridescent glamour of youth. The call of the river was lost among the dim, unregretted memories of the past. SHEATZ HELPED MACHINE

His Legislative Labor in the Interest of Vicious Legislation.

Voted for Press Muzzler, Kingston Water Snake and Other Iniquities During the Session of 1905.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 3, '07. Special Correspondence.

In his Williams Grove speech last week the Machine Republican candidate for State Treasurer declared that he had endeavored to enact revenue measures, during the last session of the Legislature, so as to provide ample funds to pay the soldiers' pensions under the Cochran act, as amended in the House Committee on Appropriations. The records show that he never uttered a syllable in favor of any revenue bill during the session. During the sessions of 1903 and 1905 he voted against the revenue bills introduced by Mr. Cressy, as well as most of the other reform measures, and his speech indicates that he proposes to make a campaign of false pretense.

The truth is that Mr. Sheatz has little foundation in his legislative record for the claim that he is a reformer. He represented a different constituency from that of his colleagues, Messrs. Ripp and Call, and was obliged to be more circumspect in some matters. But the difference was more imaginary than real. He dodged some votes when they had the courage to go on record and he voted with the minority on a few occasions when his support wasn't needed by the majority. But whenever the exigencies required it he was as certain for the machine as either of the others. "A little leaven leavens the lump," it is said, and Sheatz cut his reform leaven down to the minimum.

Press Muzzler the Worst.

His first service in the Legislature was in the session of 1903. The floodgates were not raised as high to facilitate the flow of corruption during that session as in the session of 1905, but it was bad enough and the Republican candidate for State Treasurer supported all the very vicious bills. In fact it was during that session that legal means were provided for the atrocious work of the later session. If the vicious legislation of the session of 1903 had been defeated the most iniquitous work of the session of 1905 would never have been undertaken. Iniquity feeds and fattens on vice and the legislation of 1903 made that of 1905 possible.

Probably the most far-reaching iniquity of the session of 1903 was the Salus-Grady "press-muzzler." The prosecution of the late Senator Quay in the criminal courts of Philadelphia, inspired that evil measure. He escaped conviction by pleading the statute of limitation. If he had been convicted a sentence to the penitentiary would have been inevitable and likely he would have died there. Small wonder that he was appalled by the peril that confronted him. He blamed the newspapers for his troubles and his dangers. If they had been less honest, less enterprising and more amenable to "those mysterious influences" through which Quay controlled conventions, there would have been no criminal prosecution of Quay for violating the laws and the constitution.

When Quay emerged from the criminal court, with the shadow of the penitentiary hanging over him, he declared war on the newspapers. He publicly boasted that he would "clip the journalistic wings," so to speak, at any expense in money and trouble. The Salus-Grady libel law was the spawn of this mad passion. He and Pennypacker together evolved it from their brains, and Grady and Salus, shameless machine servants, introduced it into the chambers in which they respectively served. It was the crowning infamy of legislative history. It was so atrocious that nobody believed it would pass. Legislators regarded it as froth from the mouth of a victim of rabies. Dragooning Legislators for Muzzler.

But it was no joke, so far as the machine managers were concerned. It wasn't forced to immediate consideration. Time was allowed to recover from the shock which its first appearance caused to the public conscience. Then the screws were put on. Charitable appropriations were threatened. Private interests were menaced. Political hopes were blasted. Every conceivable agency was invoked to cajole and coerce senators and Representatives to the support of the measure. Two Senators, themselves owners and editors of newspapers, made pitiable objects, as they cast their forced votes for the self-stultifying iniquity. Others blushed with shame as they obeyed the orders of the boss.

Nobody misunderstood the purpose and purport of the measure. The venerable Thomas V. Cooper, for years a trusted and safe leader of the party, in burning periods and impassioned eloquence implored the bosses to abandon their nefarious purpose. No more eloquent or impressive speech was ever delivered on the floor of the House than his protest against that iniquity. But the tide of mad passion was at flood and couldn't be stopped. Able lawyers argued with masterful logic against so vicious a violation of the constitution and the spirit of Americanism, all to no purpose. It was Quay's vengeance against civic virtue. It was the penalty which immorality puts upon morality.

Among the supporters of that atrocious piece of legislation was the present Republican candidate for State Treasurer, (Legislative Record, 1903, page 909.) When Mr. Cooper pleaded for obedience to that "provision of the constitution that requires every bill to be read at length on three different days," and was declared out of order by the Speaker, Sheatz voted to sustain the Chair, though he knew, if he knew anything, that he was violating his oath of office, in so doing. But the machine required that sinister service from him, and he "threw conscience to the dogs." His vote put shame and disgrace upon the State. It pilloried Pennsylvania as an object of derision to the whole world. But it secured Sheatz a re-election.

Other Work for the Machine. But that wasn't the only service which the Republican candidate for State Treasurer performed for the machine during the legislative session of 1903. The reformers of Philadelphia in their up-hill fight against electoral frauds encountered many difficulties. One which was particularly perplexing was the fact that in certain election districts they couldn't get watchers who would be faithful. To remedy this evil they appointed watchers from other districts under the sanction of one of the Judges. During the session of 1903 a bill was introduced to stop this source of trouble to the machine. It provided that "watchers must be residents of the districts or divisions in which they act." The reformers protested against it with vehemence. But the machine needed it and it was passed, Mr. Sheatz voting in the affirmative.—Legislative Record, 1903, page 1030.

Mr. Sheatz was always liberal with the State's money and voted for every measure during the session of 1903 which contemplated the multiplication of offices. He voted for the bill to increase the number of Factory Inspectors, Legislative Record, 1903, page 1689; for an additional Law Judge in Cambria county, though a vast majority of the people of that county protested against it, Legislative Record, 1903, page 1882; appropriating $1,070 for badges for a legislative junket to Philadelphia, Legislative Record, 1903, page 2635. His bitter partisanship was revealed in his vote for the infamous Focht ballot bill, Legislative Record, 1903, page 2438; for unseating Representative Blume which present Speaker of the House Frank B. McClain denounced as a "partisan outrage," Legislative Record, 1903 page 2735. He also voted to unseat B. J. Ferry, Democrat, of Luzerne county, Legislative Record, page 2940.

The Iniquitous Water Snakes. The session of 1903 was known as the "Water Snake" session of the Legislature. That is to say during that session a number of bills were introduced chartering water companies, giving corporations authority to dam rivers and streams, authorizing the incorporation of filtering companies and selling water power, water privileges and water sheds in every direction. These measures became such a menace that Governor Pennypacker, serve as he was couldn't stand for them and notified the machine managers that they must not be sent to him for approval.

Harry Kingston of Philadelphia was the author of probably the worst of this bunch of iniquities. He was a shrewd lawyer in Philadelphia, free from the burden of conscience or scruples, and had himself sent to the Legislature for the express purpose of exploiting legislation. His water bill was a "cookoo." It gave the corporation which it created power to dam any stream in the State, change the bed of any watercourse and do anything else that cupidity and avarice might suggest. It was among those against which Pennypacker protested and it was supported at every stage by John O. Sheatz.—Legislative Record, 1903, page 2435.

As a matter of fact Mr. Sheatz didn't even pretend to be a reformer during his first session in the legislature. He didn't dare to be as open in political immoralities as Stubb, Ripp, Puhl and others. His constituents wouldn't stand for that. The Twenty-fourth ward is a pretty independent neighborhood and though the machine could nominate anybody it liked, there was no certainty of the election of a notoriously unfit man. But it can be confidently said that Sheatz was as far in the service of the machine, during the session of 1903, as he dared and that he voted with the gang whenever his vote was necessary.

The System Rather Than the Man. But after all it is less the individual than the system which is to be considered in estimating political conditions at present. If Mr. Sheatz were as worthy of public confidence as he imagines himself to be putting him into the office of State Treasurer would be a dangerous experiment. If Berry had not been in that office a year ago the public never would have known of the graft in the construction and furnishing of the capitol and the looting would be going on with increased vigor now. The plans contemplated an aggregate loot of $25,000,000 and the full amount would have been taken. Minority representation on the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings prevented that result.

No stream is purer than its source.

No man is stronger than his party. John O. Sheatz is neither mentally nor morally stronger than Pennypacker, Snyder and Mathews. They were not influenced either by cupidity or dishonesty to consent to the looting. They were told that the operation was a party necessity—that the money was needed for campaign purposes and yielded. Sheatz would have done the same and as his election will restore the partisan unanimity of the board it will be a public calamity. Good or bad, personally, his membership in the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings will work harm for the public. Moreover his election will strengthen the Penrose machine, which is an undesirable result. Sheatz is the Penrose candidate. He was promised the office at the organization of the Legislature as Plummer was similarly slated two years ago. A few years ago the Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations had immense pecuniary possibilities. The Chairman got a "rake-off" from every appropriation and it is said that one Chairman a few years ago took home "a roll as thick as his thigh." Now the Chairman foregoes ~~any share~~ on the "rake-off," and gets the nomination for State Treasurer in lieu thereof.

Penrose Plays Foxy Politics. Penrose didn't dare announce Sheatz as his candidate, however. On the contrary to conceal his purpose he declared a preference for another, having first ascertained that the other wouldn't consent. Then he allowed the country delegates to put forward his city candidate and with apparent reluctance, yielded. But he controlled the convention absolutely. He named the presiding officer, prepared the platform and even selected the Chairman of the State Committee who will conduct the campaign and control the organization. If he had been opposed to Sheatz another candidate would have been chosen. But he favored Sheatz and he holds a mortgage on Sheatz's official action in the event of his election. G. D. H.

The President's proposed naval parade in the Pacific promises to be a costly enterprise, but the public pays the expense and the Roosevelt political estate will get the benefits. The coal bill alone will amount to a million dollars and other items will advance the aggregate to four or five times that sum. It will convince the world that the big stick is a potent instrument and satisfy the people of California that Teddy is the only man fit to wield it.

Speaker Cannon declares that there will be no legislation inimical to trusts during the next session of Congress. In other words he will not allow any tariff revision or "regulation foolishness," of any description. It is about time the Speaker should reassure his clients. Considering the fact that he is liberally paid by the trusts to take care of their interests in Congress, he was entirely too indulgent with Roosevelt during the last session.

Some of our esteemed contemporaries are taking the Knox Presidential boom too seriously. The Penrose machine never intended that the Knox boom should be regarded in any light other than that of a joke. Penrose simply wanted to divert the public eye from himself and spread the Knox boom as the most available expedient. It has served the purpose, however, and it's hardly worth while talking about it.

It has been intimated that Representative Sheatz voted against the resolution introduced by Mr. Cressy of Columbia county, during the session of 1905, endorsing the policies on the rate question of President Roosevelt, but the indexing of the Legislative Record of that year is so bad that it is impossible to verify the statement. We are assured by a member of the House at that time, however, and who was present when the vote was taken, that only one Republican voted for the resolution and his name was not Sheatz.

Governor Stuart is not looting the State Treasury at present, for various reasons—notably that everybody is looking now. Probably he wouldn't loot the treasury, however, if nobody was looking. But he has kept in office most of the gang which was there while the looting was in progress and it's safe to bet that they are ready to resume if the opportunity presents itself.

As Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations Mr. Sheatz recommended the appropriation of funds to exactly double the aggregate of the revenues of the State. That indicates poor business judgment and the State Treasurer ought to be a man of good business intelligence.

The value of minority representation has been proved by the recent reforms in the administration of the State government. That being the case it would be wise for the people to continue the minority representation. If Sheatz is elected State Treasurer minority representation will be resumed.

At home stations the private soldiers washing is usually done by the married soldiers' wives, who are expected to sew on missing buttons and do repairs, for which a small sum is deducted from the private's pay.

Pat McGinnis had a good deal of trouble with his laundress Sunday after Sunday had his shirt come back with the neck button off or else hanging by a thread. He had spoken to her on the subject, and she had promised to see to it, but still the button was not on properly.

He got out of patience one Sunday when the missing button had made him late for parade and exclaimed: "Bother the woman! I'll see if I can't give her a hint this time, any how."

He then took the lid of a tin blacking box about three inches in diameter, drilled two holes in it with a fork and sewed it on to the neck of the shirt that was next to be washed. When his washing came back he found she had taken the hint. She had made a buttonhole to fit it—London Answers

Cuteness of Old Time Doctors.
Synge's "Social Life in England" quotes a number of fourteenth century hints to success for physicians which indicate that as far back as 500 years ago the medical man, in popular opinion at least, had in him the stuff that alienists are made of.

Suppose you know nothing, say there is an obstruction of the liver. Perhaps the patient will say, "Nay, master, it is my head or legs that trouble me." Repeat that it comes from the liver, and especially use the word "obstruction," for patients do not understand it, which is important.

Never dine with a patient who has not paid you; it will be cheaper to get your dinner at an inn, for such feasts are usually deducted from the surgeon's fee.

When you are treating a wound or accident, the friends of the patient should be excluded, for they may faint and cause a disturbance, but some times a higher fee may be got from persons present fainting and breaking their heads against wood and the like than from the principal patient.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Perpetual Motion Cranks.
In the days of the Mayflower the first perpetual motion inventors took out their patents for "Engines which being put in order will cause and maintain their own motions with continuance and without any borrowed force of man, horse, wind, river or brook," and in the last century they have applied for about 600 patents which are based chiefly on the force of gravity, loss of equilibrium, specific gravity of floats and weights immersed in water or other liquid, accession of receptacles inflated with air or gas under water, compression and subsequent expansion of gases and of the surface tension of liquids. So sanguinely hopeful are these ingenious designers that in many cases they provide brakes to stop their machines if necessary or to prevent any dangerous increase of speed. The care and thought expended on the principle and detail of many of the inventions demonstrate that many men of mental ability cling to the idea that perpetual motion is possible and that they themselves are successfully solving the problem.

How to Shoot a Rattler.
The writer once saw an Indian kill a rattlesnake in a very peculiar manner. The rattler was about ten feet from the Indian, who was testing the rifle on his knee, apparently taking aim. Whenever he moved the weapon a few inches the snake would move around and get exactly in line with it. Then, to show how the thing was done, the Indian moved about the snake in a circle, and the reptile moved as if its tail were on a pivot, always keeping its head and body in line with the gun. The Indian then agreed to bandage his eyes and shoot the snake in the mouth. The writer bandaged the Indian's eyes, and holding the gun by his side at arm's length, the latter pulled the trigger, and the ball entered the snake's mouth and passed the whole length of its body. "How do you take aim?" was the query. "The snake, he takes aim," was the reply. We have talked with an old hunter on this proposition, and he claims that a rattlesnake will always range directly in line with a gun or stick pointed at it.—Exchange.

Snakes as War Weapons.
When Hannibal, the great Carthaginian, was fighting Eumenes of Pergamos with a fleet of very inferior strength he hit upon an artifice which would scarcely be sanctioned by the laws of what we are pleased to call civilized warfare. He discovered by means of a bogus message under a flag of truce on which ship the king was. He then caused poisonous snakes to be inclosed in earthen jars. These he distributed among several slips and ordered them to close up on the king's galley. In the melee that followed the jars were flung on to the deck. The curious bombs were greeted at first with ridicule, which soon changed to panic when the nature of their contents made itself manifest. The galley was extricated from the fight as soon as possible, and the captains of the others, believing that the king had taken flight, followed suit, with the result that Hannibal gained a complete victory.

Cats as Retrievers.
"It is claimed," said a Chicago antiquary, "that cats may be trained as retrievers—trained to swim to your slain birds and bring them back to you in their mouths. The thing sounds incredible, but look here."

He held up the photograph of an ancient Egyptian painting. Men with spears rode on the Nile. In some of the boats large cats sat on their haunches in the stern, while toward others several cats swam with dead birds in their mouths.

"This picture," said the antiquary "proves that the Egyptians used cats for hunting dogs. If they, why not we? The original of the picture is in the British museum, where there are also several pieces of carving that display the cat in the role of a retriever."

The German and the Fatherland.
A German always remains a German. He respects and loves his fatherland, although isolated and separated from it by boundless oceans and vast continents. A German heart always remains true to the country where it first commenced to beat until it is silenced by death. As a rule, to which there are few exceptions, a man who is loyal to the country of his birth will be loyal to the country of his adoption.—Dr. Nicholas Senn.

Niagara.
Niagara is a corruption of the Seneca word "neagara," meaning "across the neck," an allusion to a strip of land between the lakes. The name has been subjected to many changes since the discovery of the cataract, more than thirty different readings being found in the writings of the various early explorers and geographers.

What He Would Do.
Grandpapa—Tommy, Tommy, you aren't behaving well. Do you know what I should do if I were a little boy like you? Tommy—Yes, grandpapa, you'd do the same as I do, 'cause if you didn't you wouldn't be a little boy like me.

Fame in Certain Quarters

Edwin Markham was one of the guests of honor at a reception given by a wealthy New York woman. During a conversation she said:

"My dear Mr. Markham, I've wanted for years to meet you and tell you how I just love that adorable picture of yours—the one with the man hoeing, you know—and his taking off his cap, and that poor wife of his—at least I suppose it's his wife—bowing her head, and the both look so tired, poor things. I have a copy of it in my own den, and the children have another in their playroom, and it's—it's—simply exquisite."

"The Angelus," I presume you mean?" replied the poet, gravely.

"Yes," doubtfully, "but we always call it 'The Hoe Man!'"

"I am glad you like it, madam," said Mr. Markham, and he took an early opportunity of escaping from his sincere but mistaken admirer.—Success Magazine

WHY DELAY?

The report of the commission which inquired into the alleged charges of graft in connection with the erection and "trimmings" of the capitol building at Harrisburg is in the hands of the Governor and the Attorney General, and has been there for some time, yet no arrests have been made though strongly recommended in the report. Why this state of affairs?

It is true, to be sure, that the leaders of the Republican party in the state do not want their fellow-conspirators to come to trial and they will make every effort to delay trial indefinitely. They will bring many things to bear upon Governor Stuart and Attorney General Todd to influence them to delay action. They may argue that the whole matter should be kept out of politics, hence the delay till after election. But do the leaders of the gang that so long misruled the state still have power and influence to "warp" a Governor who on the stump pledged his honor to the people of the state to punish all guilty persons?

If this be the case—if the Penrose machine is still sufficiently potent to turn the tide in the mind of a "pledged" Governor then the people of the state will stop, look and listen before they elect a State Treasurer who was nominated with and by the sanction and perhaps by the direct influence of that hideous gang. Still the question is why do not the Governor and Attorney General act?

PRISONERS TO WORK

County Commissioners Appleman, Snyder and Zimmerman and Sheriff Joseph P. Imbler, a prison board for Bedford county, organized in accordance with the provisions of the act passed by the state legislature and approved by the Governor May 25, 1907, this week presented to the Court the rules and regulations adopted, and they have been approved by the Court.

The fourth rule provides that all able-bodied male prisoners shall be compelled to work eight hours each day, Sundays and legal holidays excepted, during the term of their imprisonment upon the highways of the county.

They are to work under direction of a deputy appointed by the Board, and a shed is to be provided under which they may perform their labor during inclement weather. Those prisoners who refuse to work are to be confined alone in a cell in the county jail and fed on bread and water.

This is a wise move and it will most certainly reduce the number of inmates in the local prison.

It is and has been a matter of considerable comment that there are those about Bedford who will commit some theft when the chill breezes of winter begin to blow so that they may get a 30, 60 or 90 days' sentence in the county jail and thus escape the winter's cold and snow. Many a speckled hen and lump of coal have been "confiscated" for the very purpose above mentioned, but those here mentioned are not disposed to be inquisitious, hence the visits to coal piles, and cellars, and hen coops, between two days, are likely to be less frequent. It is a good move on the part of the county and the borough might take steps to furnish similar employment for the inmates of the lesser prison, commonly called "The Coop."

REV. APPLE AT F. AND M.

Former Pastor of Reformed Church Now Occupies College Chair.

Rev. A. Thomas G. Apple, pastor of St. John's Reformed church, Bedford, from 1903 until a few weeks ago, has taken up his abode in Lancaster, where as noted in The Gazette, some weeks ago he was elected to the chair of astronomy in Franklin and Marshall College.

Rev. Apple received his academic training at Clarion Collegiate Institute from which he entered Franklin and Marshall College, graduating in the class of 1878 with one of the highest honors of his class. After his graduation from college he was elected to the chair of natural sciences in Palatinate College, Myers-town, which position he resigned to take a theological course, graduating in the class of 1883 in Theological Seminary at Lancaster.

On December 21, 1883, he was ordained and installed as pastor of the Friend's Cove charge, this county, where he remained for six years. In 1889 he accepted a call from Grace church, Washington, where he remained for ten years. In 1899 he resigned his Washington pastorate to accept a call to Catawissa which charge he resigned in 1903 to accept the pastorate of St. John's Reformed church at Bedford.

As a pastor Mr. Apple has been a marked success and the several congregations he has served have honored and loved him. His scholarly attainments and diversified talents are exceptional. He is a broad-gauge thinker and is painstaking in his classifications and accurate in his deductions and calculations. His sermons, rich in thought, are literary models and always bear the marks of a strong personality.

Rev. Apple has many times favored the readers of The Gazette with information with regard to eclipses, comets, etc., the result, in each instance of his own observations and calculations.

The culture, disposition and demeanor that have endeared Mr. Apple to his congregations will win for him the respect of his classes and enable him to do the most effective work. In the selection of Rev. A. T. G. Apple for the Chair of Astronomy in Franklin and Marshall College the Board of Trustees have made no mistake; he will fill the position in a most creditable manner.

The many friends of Rev. Apple and his estimable wife regret their leaving Bedford but wish them merit leaving pleasure and prosperity in the new field.

DANIEL'S COMET

Mysterious Body Still Bright in Eastern Sky.

The comet is still plainly to be seen in the eastern sky and it will be worth while looking out at from four to five o'clock in the morning. It is the largest and best developed example of that mysterious class of objects that has visited our solar system for many years. Look for it some little distance (10 to 15 degrees) below the planet Jupiter, which is the most conspicuous object in the eastern sky. There will be no difficulty whatever in judging it, as it is as bright as a second magnitude star and can be told by its distinct tail. In the telescope it presents a beautiful sight, showing a distinct star-like nucleus surrounded by a misty halo, the coma, which flows off behind in two parallel streams as a distinct tail—so extremely thin that, though it is hundreds of thousands of miles through, the faintest stars are not obscured by it.

The comet is now approaching the sun and receding from the earth. It passed the earth at the distance of seventy millions of miles about August 1. It swung round the sun at its nearest, or perihelion, point September 4, at a distance of about fifty millions of miles, at which time it was some one hundred millions of miles from the earth; but, owing to its actual increase of size occasioned by its nearness to the sun, it will not seem so much smaller as its greater distance from us would lead one to expect. As September advances it will recede rapidly from us and soon be lost in the depths of space perhaps never to return. It was discovered in June by Mr. Daniel, after whom it has been named, a young man studying at Princeton. A.T.G.A.

SIX NORTH AMERICAN ARTICLES

Will Tell About the Victorious Athletics—McDonough Drawings.

In the most exciting race the American League ever saw the Athletics now look a sure winner. Until the end of the season they will be playing at home, while their rivals, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, are battling on the opposing grounds.

Apparently it's all over but the cheering, and everybody in this part of the country is discussing the Athletics and their famous manager, Connie Mack. The fans want to know all about the team, who the men are, where they came from, where they live, what their habits and peculiarities are.

The North American began Sunday, September 1, to publish a series of six articles, which will tell this whole story. They will be written by George M. Graham, sporting editor of The North American, who, having been with the team on the southern training trip, is familiar with every step by which the club was whipped into shape by Manager Mack and formed into the present invincible combination.

Every stage of this development will be covered, and there will be new stories about members of the team, which, with Rube Waddell, Chief Bender, Topsy Hartsel, Socks Seybold and such celebrities, including, perhaps, more famous baseball characters than any team in the country.

Wait McDonough, The North American's famous cartoonist, will contribute a series of drawings, which will illustrate the humorous side of the recital.

The articles will also be illustrated by photographs.

Order at once, and make sure that during the next six weeks you get every one of this series on the team that looks likely to bring Philadelphia its third pennant in seven years, and which, if victorious, will play the Chicago Nationals for the world's championship.

A loop was made with a rope, put around one front leg and neck, attached to two pulleys, then to Lawrence House's engine, and in less than a minute the cow was on land, badly choked, but she is all O. They were conveyed from this place in hay-wagons, six in all; two, four and one six-horse wagon. The Methodists were to join in but through some error only a few turned out. The day was a fine one and people just dropped their work and took a day off and enjoyed themselves. Horseshoe pitching by F. M. Suter, J. A. Nycum, Uncle Billy Clark and Milton Herline was one of the amusements on the picnic ground, while Rev. Warlick, W. F. Fauple, John P. A Lost Dollar.

A missionary bishop told at a dinner in New York, according to the Sun, this story about F. Marion Crawford, the famous novelist:

"Mr. Crawford went to school," he said, "in Concord, and one day he was taken to call at a Concord clergyman's. The clergyman had a missionary box on his drawing room table, and, time hanging heavily on the boy's hands, he amused himself with trying whether a silver dollar—it was all the money he had in the world, and he had converted it into that gigantic coin for safety—would go into the slit in the box's top. It was a close fit, but unfortunately it did go, and the coin slipped out of the missionary author's fingers. There was a terrible crash of silver falling among the coppers, and then the boy, as the novelists say, 'knew no more.' When he came to himself he found the clergyman and his family in raptures over his generosity."

You Could Slip Off the Edge.

There was a time—centuries ago, of course—when the learned men of the world really thought that the world was a square—not merely flat, but that it was a cube. The primitive geographers of Egypt, Assyria and China all taught that the world was a "square plane." One of the most curious discoveries ever made in Central America concerning Toltec beliefs, symbols, etc., is that they also had a similar idea concerning the form of what we now speak of as the "globe." A writer on the discoveries made among the monumental ruins of that country says "They (meaning the Peruvians, Toltecs and Quiches) believed the world to be a cube, suspended from the heavens by cords of gold fastened to each of its corners."

Good in Everything.

The late Sir Wilfred Lawson, well known as an English temperance reformer as well as a wit, invariably took a cheerful view of life and conduct. In conversation with him one day an ardent person rallied forcibly against the practice of christening vessels with champagne before being launched. Sir Wilfred did not altogether agree and said a good temperance lesson might be learned from the practice.

"How can that be?" demanded the other.

"Well," replied the baronet, "after the first taste of wine the ship takes to water and sticks to it ever after."

Health in the Canal Zone

The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fevers and malaria. It is the knowing ones—those who have used Electric Bitters, who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influence with Electric Bitters on hand. Cures blood poison too, biliousness, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Guaranteed by all druggists 50c.

Toads' Hatching Places.

Every tiny toad lays a stupendous number of eggs. A scientist received 11,545 eggs from one toad, a necessary fertility, since the chances of an egg developing into a toad are less than one in a thousand. Within two weeks after the eggs are laid the young tadpoles begin to appear and feed first on their gelatinous envelope. Next the slimy deposits common to ponds and swamps are attacked. Steadily grow the young wrigglers until their bodies enlarge to the size of thumb nails by the end of June. The long tail now is absorbed and the legs develop. They begin to hop on the bank and disperse, never to return save in the breeding season. It is at the spring of the year that the toads awake from their winter sleep below the rocks and scrub. They often have been literally frozen stiff, but they return to life as healthy as ever and on the first balmy night migrate toward the nearest breeding pond. Usually this is the old home-stand where they were born, for the toad is a domestic animal and will travel a mile or more for the sake of returning to the place of its hatching. —Chicago Tribune.

The Rivals.

"My work," remarked the baldhead dentist, "is so painless that my patients often fall asleep in the chair while I am operating."

"Hum! That's nothing," retorted his rival. "My patients nearly all insist on having their pictures taken while I am at work in order to catch the expression of delight on their faces."—London Express.

Another Comparison.

"She has a face like an incandescent globe."

"Mercy, what a shape!"

"I wasn't referring to the shape."

"What then?"

"To the fact that it lights up so beautifully."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Alive Four Months in a Grave.

Harl Das, the great Hindoo fakir, who lived in the first half of the nineteenth century, is the only wonder worker of modern times who has ever allowed himself to be buried in the ground for months. In the year 1839 Harl told General Ventura that for a certain fee he would allow a committee to test the claims which he made of being able to die and remain dead for months and then come to life again. When all was arranged Harl hypnotized himself to such a degree that his circulation was wholly stopped. When he was pronounced dead to all intents and purposes he was buried in a garden and a high wall built around the grave. Guards were stationed on the wall so that interference or deception would be impossible. Four months later Harl was exhumed according to agreement, and after a few minutes of vigorous rubbing of his body by friends he opened his eyes, and an hour later he was well and able to walk. The fakir was clean shaven when buried and is said to have come out of the grave in the same shape, a fact which is cited to prove that vitality must have been completely suspended.

Seventeenth Century Superstitions.

That it is a very unfortunate thing for a man to meet early in a morning an ill favored man or woman, a rough footed Hen, a shag-haired Dog, or a black Cat. That it is a sign of death to come in that house, where Crickets have bin many yeeres, if on a sudden they forsake the Chimney Corner. That if a man dream of eggs or fire he shall hear of anger. That to dream of the devil is good lucke. That to dream of gold good lucke, but of silver ill. That if a man be born in the daytime he shall be unfortunate. That if a child be born with a Caule on his head he shall be very fortunate. That when the palme of the right hand itcheth it is a shrewd sign he shall receive money. That it is a great signe of ill lucke if Rats gnaw a mans clothes. That it is taught for any man to give a paire of Knives to his sweetheart, for feare it cuts away all love that is between them. That it is ill lucke to have the saltseller fall toward you.

Likes Being Hunted.

The extraordinary intelligence and skill displayed by reynard when being hunted makes it extremely probable that he, in common with the huntsman and the hounds, feels the keen pleasure of the pride of art—an important constituent of the spirit of the sport. In proof of this, an old fox when fresh, has often been observed to wait for the hounds, apparently with the purpose of drawing them on, and so giving in opportunity for the display of his skill. The fox owes his present existence in England to his skill in providing sport, and it is not therefore unreasonable to suppose that he has acquired the sporting instinct, just as the pointer, the hunter and the terrier certainly enter into the spirit of the sport for which they have been bred and to which, therefore, they owe their existence.—London Standard.

Ostriches Are Poor Sailors.

"Ostriches are terrible creatures to have aboard ship in a storm," said a sailor. "Knocked about by the waves, they fall and break their legs. We once carried eight superb ostriches. They were good sailors. Their sea appetites were fine. But two days from port a nasty gale overtook us. And then it was pitiful to see those ostriches. The ship's lurches and ducks knocked them off their pins, sent them rolling back and forth, to and fro, wildly, helplessly. Imagine a dozen ostriches, now on their feet, then—bang—on their backs, their long legs in the air, rolling every which way. What you'd expect to happen happened, of course. Their legs broke. You could hear above the storm the sharp crack of the splitting bone. Of those eight fine ostriches only two reached port alive."

Books Written in Jail.

Jail seems to be a good place in which to write books. Literary men surpass themselves there. John Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress" in jail. Cervantes wrote "Don Quixote" in prison. Defoe laid the plans for "Robinson Crusoe" during a term of confinement imposed on him for the writing of a pamphlet called "The Shortest Way With the Dissenters." Leigh Hunt wrote "Rim-in" in jail. Sir Walter Raleigh during his fourteen years' imprisonment in the Tower of London wrote his excellent "History of the World." Silvio Pellico and Tasso both did their best work in jail.

Food and Digestion.

One of the biggest mistakes about food which people make is to forget that the true value of food to anybody is the measure of its digestibility. Half a pound of cheese is vastly more nourishing, as regards its mere composition, than half a pound of beef; but while the beef will be easily digested, and thus be of vast service to us, the cheese is put out of court altogether for ordinary folks by reason of its indigestibility. We should bear this rule in mind when we hear people comparing one food with another in respect of their chemical value.

A Careful Official.

"Some years ago," remarked a physician, "when the people in the south feared that an epidemic of yellow fever would spread from Cuba to this country the health board officer of a certain southern city was so careful to keep out the infection that he gave orders to disinfect all telegrams received from Havana."

"Trying on" Furniture.

When you go to buy a suit of furniture nowadays in one of our department stores you don't have to speculate as to how it will look in your room nor whether it will fit in or not. As soon as the salesman sees that a particular suit has met your fancy he calls for a porter or two and turns them loose in one of several rooms fitted up around the main showroom, setting them at work removing all the furniture in it. Then the suit that you seem to be hankering after is placed in appropriate positions in this room, and you can see at a glance just how the bedroom or parlor or dining room will look if you buy that particular suit.

There are a dozen of these smaller rooms around the main showroom, and as each one is decorated in a different manner it is easy to pick the outfit that approximates the scheme of your room at home. Like many modern ways of selling goods it is expensive in the beginning, but it pays in the end, for this plan of showing goods seldom fails of its intended effect.—New York Press.

A Widow Who Was Calm.

A lawyer was entertaining dinner guests recently with stories from his personal experiences.

"A woman came into my office one afternoon and said she wanted to see a lawyer on a rather important matter," he said. "She was very prim and self possessed."

"What can I do for you? I asked.

"Well," she said in an easy tone, "my husband was hurt in the wreck the other day."

"I noticed she was dressed in mourning, but from her indifferent tone I gathered that it had no connection with her husband's accident."

"Was your husband badly injured?" I asked.

"Yes," she answered in the same quiet voice. "He got his head cut off."—Kansas City Times.

The Talmud.

The Jewish Talmud has come down to us only through the heroic efforts of the Jews themselves and the intrepid service of John Reuchlin. Its reading was condemned by various edicts of emperors and kings; its circulation was prohibited by popes and theologians. Twelve thousand copies of this monumental work were burned at Cremona in 1559, and a similar fate befell 5,000 copies of the Koran by order of Cardinal Ximenes on the taking of Grenada by Ferdinand and Isabella. —Boston Post.

Conquered St. Peter.

A Boston clergyman tells how a witty Irishman stood before the gate of the Lippincott's Magazine. St. Peter refused him, however, telling him he was too great a sinner to enter there, and bade him go away. The man went a little distance from the gate and then crowed three times like a rooster. St. Peter at once threw open the gate and cried out: "Come in, Pat! We'll let bygones be bygones!"

Don't Wabble.

There is one sort of man that there is no place for in the universe, and that is the wabblor—the man on the fence, who never knows where he stands, who is always slipping about, dreaming, apologizing, never daring to take a firm stand on anything. Everybody despises him. He is a weakling. Better a thousand times have the reputation of being eccentric, peculiar and cranky even than never to stand for anything.—Success Magazine.

Kipling's Response.

The Cantab, the Cambridge university weekly, once asked Rudyard Kipling to contribute to its columns. In response came the following reply:

There once was a writer who wrote, "Dear Sir,—In reply to your note of yesterday's date, I am sorry to state it's no good at the prices you quote."

They Both Pitch.

Which is the greater marvel, the crack baseball pitcher or the circus man? The baseball star, to be sure, pitches a ball with wonderful facility, but the circus man pitches a tent.—Boston Globe.

No Fun For Boys.

In some of the cantons of Switzerland they have special laws made for boys. Here is a sample of them:

"If a boy throws a stone and hits a man he may be fined 3 francs.

"If a boy throws a snowball and hits a woman he may be fined 2 francs.

"If a boy calls a girl a 'red head' he may be fined from 2 to 4 francs.

"If a boy throws at frogs in a pond without being ordered to do so by his father or teacher he shall be fined a franc.

"If a boy throws a stone and breaks a window belonging to some one else his father may whip him or he may be fined 2 francs.

"If a boy makes a face at his teacher or draws pictures of him on his slate or speaks ill of him he may be fined 5 francs and have to beg his pardon.

"If a boy stones a dog or chases a cat it is a fine of a franc.

"If two boys fight without the consent of their teacher it is a fine of 3 francs.

"If a boy steals apples or other fruit it is a fine of 2 francs, and he should be beaten by his father."

The American boy who reads the above will wonder what the Swiss boy has to live for. About all he can do and not be fined is to have the measles or whooping cough.—Exchange.

Man's Unwisdom.

The simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every hour of the day by the average man. Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear corsets? Did Solomon chew tobacco? Did Ruth chew gum? Did the children of Israel make for a beer garden after crossing the Red sea? Did Rebecca eat gumdrops and ice cream and call for soda water? Adam was the first and was made perfect from head to heel. How long would he remain so after eating a mince pie before going to bed? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom five by seven, with the windows down, the door shut and two dogs under the bed! Suppose Eve had laced herself up in a corset, put on tight shoes, sat up all hours of the night eating her fill of trash and sizzled her hair. When you come to look at the way a man misbehaves himself you can only wonder he ever lived to get there. Verily, the average man behaves as if he were little better than a fool.—Woodbury (Conn.) Reporter.

A Pony Sentinel.

During one of General Custer's Indian campaigns he had a boy bungler with him who was mounted on a circus pony he had picked up somewhere. The animal was not only full of tricks, but he proved himself a better sentinel than any of the soldiers. Three times in four months, he saved the camp from a night attack when no other suspected that danger was near. Upon one occasion the pony, who was loose and walking about camp, discovered a sentinel asleep on his post. That was wrong, and the animal knew it was, and he gave the soldier such a bite on the arm as caused him to yell out and arouse the whole camp. Pony and boy both died in Custer's last battle. The pony had twelve arrows in his body when found.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

As It Looked to Him.

One of the ladies in fancy dress was, though fair enough, a trifle fat, and we will not say that she did not look well out of the thirties. And there spake to her a reporter:

"May I ask what character you represent?"

"Helen of Troy," she answered.

"What did you think it was?"

"Well," he murmured, ungallantly enough, as weights and measures confused his brain and he gazed on her ample proportions, "I thought you might be Helen of Avoirdupois!"

Voting in the Senate.

Jefferson's Manual says: 1. When the yeas and nays are ordered, the names of senators shall be called alphabetically, and each senator shall without delay declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the senate, and no senator shall be permitted to vote after the division shall have been announced by the presiding officer, but may, for sufficient reasons with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the presiding officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous request (section 41). 2. When a senator declines to vote on call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and, having assigned them, the presiding officer shall submit the question to the senate. "Shall the senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate, and these proceedings shall be held after the roll call and before the result is announced, and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement (sections 17 and 16).

A Fiery Speech.

William O'Brien in his "Recollections" gives this picture of Timothy Healy's first appearance in parliament. "A quarter of an hour after he took his seat as member for Wexford he started up to make his maiden speech—tiny of frame, sardonic of visage, his hands in his breeches pockets, as coolly insolent as a Parisian gamine, as entirely detestable as a small Diogenes, peering over the rims of his pince-nez as from his tub, through billious eyes over his contemptible audience and horrified the house of commons with the following exordium: 'Mr. Speaker, if the noble marquis (Hartington) thinks he is going to bully us with his high and mighty Cavendish ways, all I can tell him is he will find himself knocked into a cocked hat in a jiffy, and we will have to put him to the necessity of wiping the blood of all the Cavendishes from his noble nose a good many times before he disposes of us.'"

A Singular Dream.

A singular dream is related in a well known British magazine. A woman suffering from anxiety caused by reduced circumstances dreamed that she went to church. "The people began to go out one by one. I looked around and inquired why they were leaving the church. They said: 'To look for the magic bird in the churchyard. You will always have luck if you find it.' I thought I would try to find it, went out and swept away the fallen leaves and found a speckled thrush, and as soon as I took it up it dropped £1 in my hand. The next morning I went into our back garden and there among the fallen leaves was the speckled thrush, which had just been killed by a cat. It was yet warm. I said, 'Here is the magic bird, and the money I know will come by post.' The hope was justified, for £1 came in the morning and a check from a friend in the evening."

The Unexpected.

A curious story is that of the late Colonel Harry McCalmont of the British army. He was a poor man when he went to the reading of his uncle's will, hoping that perhaps the departed might have remembered him to the extent of an old watch. True enough the lawyer read out the words, "To my nephew, Harry McCalmont, I leave my watch and chain." The lawyer was satisfied, and, leaning back, he drew, lulled by the monotonous tones of the lawyer as he read through the long instrument. At the close he arose to go. "I congratulate you," said the solicitor. "I don't know why you should," said the other. "You are residuary legatee," remarked the lawyer. "You will have £4,000 annually for the first five years from this date and afterward you will inherit some £7,000,000."

Unlearned, but Wise.

"I'm after justice rather than law," said John Dudley, who for twenty-one years, from 1770 to 1791, was one of the most popular judges of New Hampshire. He was unlearned in the law, and his education was so defective that he could not write five consecutive sentences in correct English, yet so acceptably did he discharge his judicial duties that Chief Justice Parsons of Massachusetts, one of the most learned of lawyers, said of him, "We may smile at his law and ridicule his language, yet Dudley, take him all in all, was the greatest and best judge I ever knew in New Hampshire."

Where the Immigrants Go

With regard to the distribution of newly arrived immigrants, the figures of the Bureau of Immigration show that of the 1,200,000 immigrants who passed through Ellis Island in 1906, about thirty per cent. were destined for New York state, and most of these for the metropolitan district, twenty per cent. for Pennsylvania, seven per cent each for Illinois and Massachusetts, and five and one-half per cent. each for New Jersey and Ohio. This would seem to indicate a considerable congestion. But it must be taken into consideration that the immigration statistics do not take into account the great number who stay in New York only long enough to discover where they may go, or to earn enough for their passage to agricultural districts. New York is the clearing house, and already there are large movements at work to draw from it the newly-arrived labor so badly needed in the mills of the south, on the railroads of the southwest, in the wheat fields of the great plains—wherever there is capital and undeveloped resources. —From "Levelling Our Population," by Carlyle Ellis, in National Magazine for September.

There are a great many people who have slight attacks of indigestion and dyspepsia nearly all the time. Their food may satisfy the appetite but it fails to nourish the body simply because the stomach is not in fit condition to do the work it is supposed to do. It can't digest the food you eat. The stomach should be given help. You ought to take something that will do the work your stomach can't do. Kodol For Indigestion and Dyspepsia, a combination of natural digestants and vegetable acids, digests the food itself and gives strength and health to the stomach. Pleasant to take. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package, and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Ed. D. Heckerman.

Better the Lot of Lazarus

England is rich. Assume, by way of imagery, that the national wealth is a loaf of bread at which forty millions feed and that the loaf is sliced into twelve parts. Now eleven slices go to the uppermost five millions. The thirty-five millions are all gnawing at the remaining one slice. An enormous and perturbing fact. It is evident that one slice, since the loaf is not miraculous, cannot feed the thirty-five millions; quite evident, many get not even a crumb. In London last year two hundred died in the streets of starvation; they got not a crumb, and year in and year out two millions are on the verge of starvation. —From "The Pent and Huddled East," by Vance Thompson in The Outlook Magazine for September.

Weak Women
Here is a play, which is vouched for by two old ball players who saw it come off and admitted to be true by the victim of the catch, big Em Gross, once the star catcher of the National league and perhaps the heaviest hitting catcher that ever donned a glove. Em was a great catcher, a wonderful thrower and a grand hitter, but he had his weakness, and that was in catching foul flies. Some facetious writer in those days remarked that Em couldn't see the high ones in daytime. He tried for everything in sight, ran circles around the ball and sometimes speared it, but he never felt at ease when one of those tall twisting fouls went up. He was catching in Providence one day when a Philadelphia batter poked up a fly that looked 500 feet high. There was a wind blowing, and the ball began to twist around in circles, with Em doing a merry-go-round under it. Finally, seeing that it was escaping, he made a desperate effort to turn quickly and fell flat on his back. Instinctively he threw up his feet and hands to protect his face. The ball struck the sole of his shoe, bounded up into the air, and as it fell again Em reached out and caught it. And the next morning Providence's papers had the nerve to say he did it on purpose.—Chicago Tribune.

Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., member of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and a well-known club woman, says: "This winter when I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills I ached in every bone and had intense pains in the kidneys and pelvic organs. The urine was thick and cloudy, and I could barely get enough to live. I felt a change for the better within a week. The second week I began eating heartily. Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments. The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

The Strain of the Glass Houses.
"The son of a glassblower is rarely found in the same employment," said a speaker at a child labor conference. "I would rather send my boys straight to hell than send them by way of the glass house," one glassblower is quoted as saying. It appears that the character of the men is greatly affected by the extreme heat and consequent physical strain of the glass houses.

Moved the Audience.
"Did you notice how I moved the audience last night?" asked the amateur elocutionist. "Moved isn't the proper name for it," rejoined his critical friend. "It was little short of a stampede."

Comparatively.
Towne—Yes, my wife is able to dress on comparatively little money. Brown—Oh, come now! Comparatively little? Towne—I mean on little compared with what she thinks she ought to have.

Clear writers, like clear fountains, do not seem so deep as they are. The turbid look the most profound.—Lander.

Tired mothers, worn out by the peevish, cross baby have found Casca-sweet a boon and a blessing. Casca-sweet is for babies and children, and is especially good for the ill so common in hot weather. Look for the ingredients printed on the bottle. Contains no harmful drugs. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

The bites and stings of insects, tan, sunburn, cuts, burns and bruises are relieved at once with Pinesalve Carbolyzed. Acts like a poultice, and draws out inflammation. Try it. Price 25c. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

The New Pure Food and Drug Law
We are pleased to announce that Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds and lung troubles is not affected by the National Pure Food and Drug Law as it contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, and we recommend it as a safe remedy for children and adults. Ed. D. Heckerman.

He Took a Rest.
As it is undoubtedly true that one man's meat may be another man's poison, so it happens sometimes that what seems like work to one person is regarded as recreation by another.

"Had a good lecture on Alaska, didn't we, Eh?" asked one of Mr. Dodd's neighbors, meeting him the day of the lecture. "To sit there peacefully as ple for two hours, hearing him recite off the information and seeing those pictures cast on the screen, was a grand rest for me, beat out with crabbering as I be."

"It was a good enough talk," admitted Mr. Dodd, in a grudging tone, "but it didn't rest me any to speak of. Between having to set stock still without a chance to get in a word for two mortal hours and crane my neck looking at those views, I was pretty well worn when I got home. But I took the lantern out into the wood shed, and by the time I'd split up a week's kindlings I felt kind of rested an' calmed down." —Youth's Companion.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers are good for anyone who needs a pill. They are small, safe, sure, little pills that do not gripe or sicken. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Lost and Found.
Lost, between 9.30 p. m., yesterday and noon today, bilious attack, with nausea and sick headache. This loss was occasioned by finding at a Bedford drug store a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Guaranteed for biliousness, malaria and jaundice. 25c.

Asks a Good Deal.
"How about the rent of this house of yours, Flitter? Doesn't the landlord ask a good deal for it?" Flitter—Yes. He often asks five and six times a month for it.

DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve is good for boils, burns, cuts, scalds and skin diseases. It is especially good for piles. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

If you suffer from bloating, belching, sour stomach, indigestion or dyspepsia, take a Rings Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal, and overcome the disagreeable trouble. It will improve the appetite, and aid digestion. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

LETTER TO HARRY C. JAMES
Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sir: We should like to print our opinion of this guarantee in its paper, where all your neighbors will see it:

We'll furnish the paint to paint half the house of any fair man on these terms: He shall paint the other half with whatever other paint he likes; same painter (any fair man) same way (the way of all fair painters, to make a good job). If our half doesn't take less gallons of paint by one-tenth to seven-tenths, we'll give him the paint. If our half doesn't take less labor by one-tenth to seven-tenths, we'll give him the paint. If our half isn't sounder three years hence, we'll give him the paint. If our half isn't sounder six years hence, we'll give him the paint. Any color.

We say one-tenth, because there are two or three paints with about that difference; we say seven—there are dozens of paints with about that difference—we say one to seven, because there's a hundred that waste one-third of the money paid for both paint and labor.

Is there a paint we haven't covered?

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & CO

If you use a substantial and stylish writing paper—one that is easy to write upon and always correct, you create a good impression and please your correspondent.

Letters written on bad paper are seldom saved—they convey none of your personality. A good up-to-date paper is just as essential as the composition of a letter.

All

OXFORDS AND LOW PRICES

are synonymous just now. If we can get cost we're satisfied—yet there are three months ahead to wear them. We do not have all the sizes of the different styles carried earlier in the season, but all we have to offer for this sale are good ones—and bargains.
